Nowadays many people like to buy books and many other things from the Internet. In other words, it is very prevalent for customers to buy anything from their cell phone or notebooks rather than from the brick-and-mortar stores such as the Costco Wholesale Corporation and the SOGO department stores. In fact, some people consider it cheaper and more convenient to do their on-line shopping and they are getting addicted to it.

However, there are some issues that might raise our concerns about on-line shopping. For instance, many people are worried about the safety of their on-line shopping, questioning whether their personal identity and financial information have been securely protected by the websites of these on-line stores. Some people are also concerned about the quality of the products they have purchased on-line from private seller, wondering whom they could turn to if there is any scam involved in their transactions.

37. What is the main topic of this passage?
